Areas of achievement

The adoption by the international community of both Sustainable Development Goals, which includes the standalone urban goal— (SDG 11) to make cities and human settlements safe, inclusive, resilient, and sustainable, – and the New Urban Agenda (NUA) – firmly places urbanization at the forefront of international development policy.

In selecting the winners for the award, the Selection Committee will look out for best practices initiatives and achievements related to SDG 11, which consists of 10 targets and 15 related indicators (see table 1: Targets and Current Indicators). Initiatives and achievements related to any of the targets/indicators are welcome.

The Selection Committee will also look at achievements related to SDG 11 particularly in the context of the challenges posed by the COVID-19 pandemic and innovative solutions.

This year, the selection committee will give particular attention to achievements related to this year's World Habitat Day theme "Housing For All: A better Urban Future".

The Agenda 2030 for Sustainable Development, particularly Sustainable Development Goal 11.1 and the New Urban Agenda, all consider housing as an urgent and critical issue that must be addressed to ensure the future prosperity and sustainability of our planet.

International human rights law recognizes everyone's right to an adequate standard of living, including adequate housing. Despite the central place of this right within the global legal system, well over a billion people are not adequately housed.

Millions around the world live in life- or health threatening conditions, in overcrowded slums and informal settlements, or in other conditions which do not uphold their human rights and their dignity. Further millions are forcibly evicted, or threatened with forced eviction, from their homes every year.

Adequate housing must provide more than four walls and a roof. A number of conditions must be met before particular forms of shelter can be considered to constitute "adequate housing." These elements are just as fundamental as the basic supply and availability of housing. For housing to be adequate, it must, at a minimum, meet the following criteria:

- Security of tenure,
- Availability of services, materials, facilities and infrastructure,
- Affordability,
- Habitability,
- Accessibility,
- Location, and
- Cultural adequacy.

Nominations of individuals and organisations that have made a demonstrable contribution to achieving the seven criteria of adequate housing in a manner with the potential for replication at national, regional or global levels are encouraged.
