

TERMS OF REFERENCE AND RULES OF PROCEDURE

FOR

THE UN-HABITAT ADVISORY GROUP ON GENDER ISSUES (AGGI)

BACKGROUND:

The twenty first century is an urban century, in which half of the global population lives in cities. Urbanization is a powerful force that generates economic growth, social/political advances and technical and scientific progress. Each week three million people are added to cities in the developing world. One in every three of these people live in urban slums, a number expected to increase. Of these, as many as two-thirds are women and girls, often suffering the worst effects of slum life, such as poor access to clean water, inadequate sanitation, unemployment, insecurity of tenure and gender-based violence. Whereas, it is also women and girls who make the difference in urbanization and help communities develop sustainably. Women make a difference in the lives of families and community to cope with its negative effects, and implement strategies to enhance urbanization. The many roles that women play, at the family, household and community level, vitally contribute to sustainable urban development.

The United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat) originally established as the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (UNCHS) by Resolution of the General Assembly of the United Nations 32/162 of 19 December 1977, and thereafter transformed into a subsidiary organ of the General Assembly of the United Nations by its Resolution 56/206 of 21 December 2001, with its headquarters in Nairobi, Kenya, has played a pro-active role in recognizing and supporting women's roles in human settlement development.

After the Nairobi Conference in 1985, UNCHS recognized the fact that women were missing from the human settlements agenda and ran a series of regional consultations to address this. Consequently, UNCHS established the Women and Human Settlements Office, to play a role in facilitating external relations of Habitat on women's issues in human settlements, and later created a Gender Mainstreaming Unit to ensure gender mainstreaming across the UN-Habitat.

In 1995, during the United Nations (UN) 4th World's Women Conference in Beijing, the then Executive Director of UNCHS, Wally N'Dow, announced the formation of the Huairou Commission<sup>1</sup> to monitor the Habitat II conference of 1996 from a women's perspective, and as a vehicle to strengthen the involvement of women in the human settlements arena, a role which it has continued to play.<sup>2</sup>

In this regard, much work has been done by UN-Habitat and its partners (particularly the Huairou Commission) on women's empowerment and gender equality, but more remains to be done.

An evaluation of the gender work of UN-Habitat conducted in 2011 revealed a need for more focused look at gender mainstreaming and gender equality across all levels of UN-Habitat. Therefore, the Governing Council at its twenty-third session<sup>3</sup> through resolution 23/1, requested the strengthening of UN-Habitat's gender focus through, among other processes, the formation of an Advisory Group on gender issues. This positive advancement will give stronger emphasis upon the importance of gender equality and women's empowerment and will put on the forefront women as vital agents of change in human settlements work.

In 2013, the AGGI mandate was further strengthened at the twenty-fourth session with the adoption of resolution 24/4, which requested the Executive Director to make optimal use of AGGI. In 2017, GC resolution 26/10 further highlighted the importance of AGGI in gender mainstreaming at UN-Habitat and calls on the Executive Director to strengthen gender mainstreaming in line with the New Urban Agenda. (attached as Annex 1 for all three GC resolutions, for ease of reference).

<sup>1</sup> The Huairou Commission, a registered non-governmental organization with a global secretariat in Brooklyn, New York (NY), was established to ensure that grassroots women would have a voice at UN conferences and in other development processes. It develops strategic partnerships and linkages among grassroots women's organizations, advancing their capacity to collectively influence political spaces on behalf of their communities and enhance their sustainable, resilient community development practices.

<sup>2</sup> Affirmed in Report to the General Assembly by the Secretary General on Habitat II, A/Conf.165/PC.3/3 November 15, 1995.

ANNEX 2: Definitions of Terms
--------------------------------------

Gender refers to the social attributes and opportunities association with being male and female and the relationships between women and men and girls and boys, as well as the relations between women and those between men. These attributes, opportunities and relationships are socially constructed and are learned through socialization processes. They are context/time-specific and changeable. Gender determines what is expected, allowed and valued in a women or a man in a given context. In most societies there are differences and inequalities between women and men in responsibilities, assigned, activities undertaken, access to and control over resources as well as decision making opportunities. Gender is part of the broader socio-cultural context. Other important criteria for socio-cultural analysis include class, race, poverty level, ethnic group and age.<sup>6</sup>

Gender equality refers to the equal rights, responsibilities and opportunities of women and men and girls and boy's Equality does not mean that women and men will become the same but that women's and men's rights, responsibilities and opportunities will not depend on whether they are born male or female. Gender equality implies that the interests, needs and priorities of both women and men are taken into consideration-recognizing the diversity of different groups of women and men. Gender equality is not a "women's issues" but should concerns and fully engage men as well as women. Equality between women and men is seen both as a human rights issue and as a precondition for, and indicator of, sustainable people centered development.<sup>7</sup>

Gender equity refers to the process of giving fair treatment to women and men. The goal of gender equity looks beyond equality of opportunity as it requires transformative change. Gender equity recognizes that different measures might be required for men and women where: they reflect different needs and priorities; or where their existing situation means that some groups of women or men need special or additional supportive measures to ensure that all are on a 'level playing field'.<sup>8</sup>

Women's empowerment is related to gender equality but distinct from it. The core of empowerment lies in the ability of a woman to plan and control her own destiny. This implies that to be empowered women must not only have equal capabilities (such as education and health) and equal access to resources and opportunities (such as land and employment) they must also have the UN-Habitat to use those rights, capabilities, resources and opportunities to make strategic choices and decisions (such as are provided through leadership opportunities and participation in political institutions). And to exercise UN-Habitat, women must live without the fear of coercion and violence.<sup>9</sup>

Gender Mainstreaming a gender perspective is the process of assessing the implication for women and men of any planned action, including legislation, policies or programmes in all areas and at all levels. It is a strategy for making women as well as men's concerns and experiences an integral dimension of the design, implementation, monitoring and evaluation of policies and programmes in all political, economic and societal spheres so that women and men benefit equally and inequality is not perpetuated. The ultimate goal is to achieve gender equality.<sup>10</sup>
