H. Work of the Committee of the Whole

32. The Committee of the Whole, which was chaired by Mr. S.K. Bhattacharya (Bangladesh), Vice-Chair of the Commission, held five meetings, from 12 to 15 February 2001.

I. Work of the Drafting Committee and adoption of resolutions by the Commission

33. The Drafting Committee, which was chaired by Mr. José Luis Casal (Argentina), Vice-Chair of the Commission, held 10 meetings, between 13 and 16 February 2001. Of the 13 draft resolutions before the Committee, it reached agreement on 10. One resolution, on the impact of human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) and acquired immunodeficiency syndrome (AIDS) on the young (HS/C/18/CRP.6), was withdrawn.

34. The Drafting Committee was unable to reach consensus on two draft resolutions, on the establishment of the Committee of Permanent Representatives as an inter-sessional subsidiary body of the Commission on Human Settlements (HS/C/18/L.10) and on illegal Israeli human settlements in the occupied Palestinian territories (HS/C/18/CRP.2/Rev.2). The two draft resolutions were submitted directly to the plenary for its consideration.

35. At the 8th plenary meeting, the Commission adopted the draft resolution on the establishment of the Committee of Permanent Representatives as an inter-sessional subsidiary body of the Commission, following a statement by a representative of the secretariat that its adoption would have no programme or budgetary implications.

36. Also at the 8th plenary meeting, the Commission held a roll-call vote at the request of the representative of the United States on the draft resolution on illegal Israeli settlements in the occupied Palestinian territories. The draft resolution was adopted by 22 votes to 1, with 1 abstentions.

37. The resolutions, as adopted by the Commission, are contained in annex I below, together with an indication of the date and meeting of their adoption. Except as otherwise indicated in annex I, all resolutions were adopted by consensus.

J. Adoption of the report on the session

38. The present proceedings were adopted by the Commission at its 7th plenary meeting, on 16 February 2001.

III. PROVISIONAL AGENDA AND OTHER ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE NINETEENTH SESSION OF THE COMMISSION

A. Introduction

39. The Commission considered agenda item 11 at its 7th plenary meeting, on 16 February 2001. It had before it a note by the Executive Director on the provisional agenda and other arrangements for the nineteenth session of the Commission on Human Settlements (HS/C/18/14).
B. Discussion

40. There was general agreement with the secretariat’s recommendation that the nineteenth session of the Commission be held in April or May 2003. Several delegations, referring to problems that had arisen during the current session because it had followed immediately after the twenty-first session of the UNEP Governing Council, asked that efforts be made to ensure that the next session of the Commission not follow so closely or otherwise conflict with other meetings, such as those of the Commission on Sustainable Development.

41. As to the duration of the next session, there was a division of opinion among the delegations. In the interests of economy, both for the Centre and for delegations, several argued for a five-day session, noting that even though it had had a heavy agenda during the current session, the Commission had accomplished all of its work. Others argued for a return to an eight-day session, as recommended by the secretariat, holding that a five-day session was unduly taxing, requiring all-night drafting sessions. More important, such sessions required meetings and other events to run simultaneously, which deprived smaller delegations of the chance to participate fully.

C. Action by the Commission

42. At its 7th plenary meeting, on 16 February 2001, the Commission decided that its nineteenth session would be held from 5 to 9 May 2003 at the headquarters of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) in Nairobi. At the same meeting, the Commission decided to adopt the following provisional agenda for its nineteenth session:

1. Election of officers.
2. Credentials.
3. Adoption of the agenda and organization of work.
5. Follow-up to the special session of the General Assembly for an overall review and appraisal of the implementation of the Habitat Agenda.
6. Special themes:
   (a) Urban development strategies and shelter strategies favouring the poor;
   (b) The rural dimension of sustainable urban development.
7. Report of the Executive Director on the dialogues on effective decentralization and strengthening of local authorities.
10. Coordination matters:

(a) Cooperation between the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) and the United Nations Environment Programme;

(b) Cooperation with agencies and organizations within the United Nations system, intergovernmental organizations outside the United Nations system and non-governmental organizations;

(c) Matters arising out of the resolutions of major legislative organs of the United Nations and other intergovernmental bodies which are brought to the attention of the Commission.

11. Themes for the twentieth and future sessions of the Commission.

12. Other matters.

13. Provisional agenda and other arrangements for the twentieth session of the Commission.

14. Adoption of the report of the session.

15. Closure of the session.

IV. CLOSURE OF THE SESSION

43. In her closing remarks, the Executive Director said that the session had allowed her to enter into substantive discussions with delegations on the future of the Centre and on the direction of human settlements in international development, almost five years after Habitat II. She noted that the delegations had engaged in intensive debates on the agenda items, with very constructive negotiations on resolutions, substantive dialogues between Habitat Agenda partners and a series of side events on matters of interest to the future of human settlements. The eighteenth session had been very successful and had adopted very significant resolutions concerning revitalization and the Centre’s work with Governments and partners in civil society.

44. She was particularly pleased that the inclusion of dialogues with partners in the plenary discussions, introduced only at the last session of the Commission, had become a core element in the work of the Commission. She was impressed by the consistent references made by many delegates to the importance of the new strategic vision which had been adopted at the previous session. That had served to underline and reinforce the endorsement that the Centre had received for its focus on normative activities; the discussions at the eighteenth session already pointed to the very positive results of the new strategy.

45. She noted with satisfaction that the eighteenth session had confirmed the importance of secure tenure and urban governance in achieving adequate shelter for all and sustainable human settlements in an urbanizing world. Moreover, the specific invitation to Governments and all other partners of the Centre to mobilize further contributions to the two campaigns had come at the right moment and was clearly understood as an endorsement by the Commission.
46. The intensive discussion and subsequent approval of the work programme and the budget had confirmed that revitalization of the Centre was an ongoing process. Continuing support by the member States was vital if the Centre’s capacity for the discharge of its mandate as a focal point in the United Nations system for the Habitat Agenda was to be enhanced.

47. Following the customary exchange of courtesies, the Chair declared the eighteenth session of the Commission on Human Settlements closed at 8 p.m. on 16 February 2001.

Also recalling General Assembly resolution 54/209 of 22 December 1999 on the follow-up to the United Nations Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat II), which endorses “two global campaigns, concerning secure tenure and urban governance, as strategic points of entry for the effective implementation of the Habitat Agenda”, and resolution 17/1 of 14 May 1999 of the Commission on Human Settlements on the same topic,

Noting with appreciation the initial activities undertaken by the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) for the conceptualization and implementation of the campaigns, including the launches of the Global Campaign for Secure Tenure and the activities and partnerships under way for the Global Campaign for Urban Governance and, in this connection, the financial support already received from several member States,

Also noting with appreciation the active partnerships established with Habitat Agenda partners around the two campaigns, and recognizing the activities initiated within the existing and emerging working relationships,

7 HS/C/18/10.
Noting with concern that the future of the long-term cooperation in the joint Sustainable Cities Programme is unclear since neither the Centre nor the Programme has been able to commit the necessary resources for their respective contributions for 2001 and onwards,

The Commission on Human Settlements,

Recalling its resolution 17/17 of 14 May 1999 on international cooperation for the implementation of the Habitat Agenda,
Also recalling paragraph 195 of the Habitat Agenda,\(^3\) which emphasizes that the implementation of the Habitat Agenda is the primary responsibility of each country at the national and local levels within the legal framework of each country, but recognizes that the overall decline in official development assistance is a serious cause for concern,

Further recalling paragraph 211 of the Habitat Agenda, which contains an appeal to all multilateral and bilateral development agencies and the Bretton Woods institutions, regional and subregional development banks and funds to establish and/or strengthen cooperative mechanisms to integrate commitments and actions concerning adequate shelter for all and sustainable human settlements development into their policies, programmes and operations,

Welcoming Economic and Social Council agreed conclusions 2000/1, concerning the review by the Executive Committee of the United Nations Development Group of the commitments made by relevant United Nations bodies and agencies on implementing the goals of the Habitat Agenda, the review by the Secretary-General of the participation by the Centre in all aspects of the work of the Administrative Committee on Coordination and its subsidiary machinery in the light of its role as a focal point in the United Nations system in implementing the Habitat Agenda, and the consideration by the Secretary-General of the adoption of a Habitat Agenda task manager system to facilitate coordinated implementation of the Habitat Agenda by the United Nations system,

1. Takes note of the report of the Executive Director of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) on international cooperation and the review of mechanisms for monitoring the implementation of the Habitat Agenda;

2. Reiterates its appeal to Governments in a position to do so to make voluntary financial contributions to the secretariat to assist developing countries, particularly the least developed countries, including, inter alia, representatives of parliaments, local authorities, non-governmental organizations and community-based organizations networks from such countries, to participate in the upcoming special session of the United Nations General Assembly for an overall review and appraisal of the implementation of the Habitat Agenda;

3. Calls upon United Nations organizations and agencies to use, where possible, the existing coordinating mechanisms of the United Nations Development Group and the United Nations Development Assistance Framework to demonstrate their capacity and complementary action and to make such efforts visible at all levels concerning the coordinated implementation of the goals of the Habitat Agenda, including the mobilization of additional international financial and technical support;

4. Expressing concern at the existing imbalance between earmarked and non-earmarked contributions and at the fact that only thirty-four and twenty-six Governments in 1999 and 2000, respectively, contributed non-earmarked funds to the Foundation,

13. Recommends that the Executive Director endeavour to ensure that the bulk of additional funding received by the Centre during the biennium is allocated to the implementation of programme activities, rather than to administrative costs;

   (d) Support the increased participation of local authorities in the work of the Commission on Human Settlements, in the work of the Centre and in the implementation of the Habitat Agenda, within the relevant rules and regulations of the United Nations;

4. Invites national Governments to facilitate local authorities, with the assistance of their associations, within the legal framework of each country, to consider the following measures as appropriate:

   (a) Adopt comprehensive city development strategies as a means of mobilizing all other Habitat Agenda partners behind a common vision and action plan for addressing issues related to adequate shelter for all and sustainable human settlements development;

   (b) Provide improved access to legal security of tenure and equal access to land for all people, including women and those living in poverty, as a key element of slum-upgrading and poverty reduction strategies;

   (c) Ensure that women and men have equal access to decision-making processes, resources and basic services and that this access is measured through gender-disaggregated data;

   (d) Improve the effectiveness and efficiency of local revenue collection and use;

   (e) Increase their accountability to local communities through transparent processes and by creating public feedback mechanisms, as appropriate, inter alia, local urban observatories, ombudsman offices, and procedures for public petitioning;

5. Invites the international community, as appropriate, in cooperation with national Governments to consider the following measures:

   (a) Support international, regional and national associations and networks of local authorities and the Advisory Committee of Local Authorities and promote their contribution to the work of the Commission on Human Settlements and the Centre;
(b) Support local authorities through, inter alia, improved training, peer-to-peer learning, city-to-city transfers and international exchanges based on documented examples of best practices, good policies and action plans that match the demand for solutions with proven practice;

6. Calls upon the Executive Director to:

(a) Continue to involve local authorities and their international associations in the preparation, implementation and evaluation of the work programme of the Centre, and particularly in the two global campaigns, within the rules and regulations of the United Nations;

(b) Continue and expand the identification, analysis and dissemination of best practices, good policies and enabling legislation and action plans, with a particular focus on sustainable human settlements development and urban poverty reduction at the local level;

(c) Report to it at its nineteenth session on progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

8th meeting
16 February 2001

18/11. Intensifying dialogue on effective decentralization and strengthening of local authorities within the framework of implementing the Habitat Agenda

The Commission on Human Settlements,

Recalling that, at the second United Nations Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat II), held in Istanbul in June 1996, national Governments committed themselves to the objectives of: decentralizing authority and resources, as appropriate, as well as functions and responsibilities to the level most effective in addressing the needs of people in their settlements, and enabling local leadership, promoting democratic rule and strengthening of local authorities to enable all key actors to play an effective role in human settlements and shelter development,

Further recalling that in the Istanbul Declaration, national Governments recognized local authorities as their closest partners, and as essential in the implementation of the Habitat Agenda,

Noting with appreciation the deepening of the partnership at the international level between the Commission, local authorities and their international associations,

Recognizing as a guide for decentralization policies, that decisions should be taken and services delivered at the most local level of government consistent with the nature of the decisions and services involved and within the legal framework of each country,

Taking note of the report of the Executive Director on decentralization and the strengthening of local authorities and their networks for implementation of the Habitat Agenda,

22 HS/C/18/3/Add.1.
Recognizing with satisfaction the growing international trend of decentralization and the strengthening of local authorities to face the challenges of human settlements in the twenty-first century,

Recalling the goals stated in paragraph 12 of the Istanbul Declaration,

Convinced that dialogue on decentralization will provide further impetus to the successful implementation of the Habitat Agenda at all levels,

Taking note of the wide divergence among members of the Commission, in discussing the Executive Director’s report, on an international framework for decentralization and strengthening of local authorities and their networks for implementation of the Habitat Agenda,

1. Requests the Director to intensify dialogue among governments at all levels and Habitat partners, initially through the Committee of Permanent Representatives and other appropriate means, on all issues related to effective decentralization and the strengthening of local authorities, including principles and, as appropriate, legal frameworks, in support of the implementation of the Habitat Agenda;

2. Calls upon the Executive Director to make this dialogue as open-ended and inclusive as feasible;

3. Also requests the Executive Director to report to it at its nineteenth session on progress made in this regard.

The Commission on Human Settlements,

Recalling its resolutions 13/6 of 8 May 1991 and 14/9 of 5 May 1993 on housing for the Palestinian people, and its resolution 16/18 of 17 May 1997 on illegal Israeli human settlements in the occupied Palestinian territories,

Reaffirming its resolution 17/9 of 14 May 1999 on illegal Israeli human settlements in the occupied Palestinian territories,

Considering that the issue of housing for the Palestinian people and the Israeli illegal settlements in the occupied territories, including East Jerusalem, falls within the mandate of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat),

Recalling paragraph 25 of the Habitat Agenda,\(^3\) in which it is stated that alien and colonial domination and foreign occupation are destructive to human settlements and should therefore be denounced and discouraged by all States, which should cooperate to achieve the elimination of such practices,

\(23\) Including the idea and the necessity of a World Charter of Local Self-Government or other alternative concepts.

\(24\) Adopted by 22 votes to 1, with 21 abstentions (see chapter II, paragraph 36 above).
Recalling also paragraph 204 (h) of the Habitat Agenda, which calls for consolidating the solidarity of the international community and its organizations to provide adequate shelter for all and sustainable human settlements development for people living under foreign occupation,

Taking note of General Assembly resolution 55/132 of 8 December 2000 on "Israeli settlements in the occupied Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem and the occupied Syrian Golan",

Concerned by Israel’s continued illegal actions in the occupied Palestinian territories, including the building of new settlements, the expansion of existing settlements, the construction of by-pass roads, the confiscation of land and the demolition of Palestinian houses,

Gravely concerned by the deterioration and destruction caused to the Palestinian human settlements as a result of recent Israeli actions in the occupied Palestinian territories,

Regretting that the reports requested in resolution 16/18 and 17/9 were not ready for presentation at the current session,

Taking note of the explanation presented by the Executive Director on the status of the requested comprehensive report on the housing situation in the occupied Palestinian territories, as well as the plans of the secretariat to ensure its completion,

1. Calls upon the Israeli authorities to implement the following measures to enable the Palestinian people in the occupied territories to ensure their housing needs:

   (a) Provide dignified and appropriate physical conditions in their human settlements where needed;

   (b) Put an end to the confiscation of Palestinian lands and the establishment of settlements in the occupied territories;

   (c) Restore to their original state occupied lands that were altered before and during the recent illegal actions;

   (d) Refrain from applying policies that prevent and hamper the issuance of building permits to the Palestinian people in the occupied territories, including East Jerusalem;

   (e) Accept the de jure applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Times of War to the occupied Palestinian territories;

2. Requests with insistence that member States and all multilateral financial institutions halt all forms of assistance and support for illegal Israeli settlement facilities in the occupied Palestinian territories;

3. Calls upon the international donor community and all financial institutions, in coordination with the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat), to increase financial assistance to alleviate the housing problems faced by the Palestinian people in the occupied territories;

4. Requests the Executive Director to organize a meeting on the establishment of a human settlements fund for the Palestinian people in the occupied Palestinian territories;
5. Also requests the Executive Director to conclude and update a comprehensive report on implementation of the present resolution, in particular regarding the housing situation in the occupied Palestinian territories and the problems posed by the Israeli illegal actions in this respect, and to present it to the Commission at its nineteenth session;

6. Invites the Commission to take appropriate measures at its nineteenth session in accordance with the findings of the comprehensive report.

Annex III

A. High-level segment

Introduction

1. The high-level segment of the eighteenth session of the Commission on Human Settlements comprised three plenary meetings, held on 12 and 13 February 2001. Its discussions focused on the following two main issues: first, the activities of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat): progress report of the Executive Director (agenda item 4); second, follow-up to the United Nations Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat II) (agenda item 5). The two items were introduced by the Executive Director (see chap. II, paras. 37 to 44 above).

1. Activities of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) (agenda item 4)

2. Many delegations welcomed the appointment of the new Executive Director of UNCHS (Habitat), which would help to strengthen the Centre as a strong independent entity.

3. A number of delegations supported the proposal made for formalizing the relationship between the Committee of Permanent Representatives and the Commission on Human Settlements (HS/C/18/2/Add.2). Several considered that it was necessary to implement the proposals without incurring additional costs, and argued that Committee meetings should be conducted in English alone (option 1 of the proposal).

4. Several delegations emphasized the need to further strengthen UNCHS (Habitat) as a centre of excellence, particularly by focusing on its core activities. General satisfaction and strong support were expressed for the direction and progress of the managerial and administrative reform and revitalization process. Delegations welcomed the steps already taken and those proposed to reorganize the financial and administrative management of the Centre. However, some observed that the ultimate indicator of the Centre’s success would be the achievement of the goal of adequate shelter for all, rather than organizational reform.

5. Many delegations pointed out that the strengthening of the Centre required additional financial resources, in particular non-earmarked resources. More-developed as well as less-developed countries were called on to increase their voluntary contributions to the Centre to enable the current revitalization to succeed. One delegation called for an increase in the volume of regular budget funds allocated to UNCHS (Habitat), in order to reduce its dependence on earmarked voluntary contributions. Several considered out that the proposals for restructuring the Centre would have to be implemented in phases as additional resources became available.

6. Many delegations expressed support for the strategic focus on security of tenure and urban governance, as expressed through the two Global Campaigns. Several called for the translation of the Campaigns into concrete operational programmes. Moreover, several delegations mentioned the need to involve national Governments more directly in the implementation of the Campaigns.

7. A number of delegations stressed the importance of the Centre’s presence in the regions, and called for the strengthening of its regional offices.
8. Several delegations stressed the importance of urban-rural linkages, an issue to which UNCHS (Habitat) should pay attention to avoid diverting attention from rural areas, villages and smaller towns.

9. Many delegations pointed out the need for UNCHS (Habitat) to address the requests made in Commission resolution 17/9 in relation to the situation in the occupied Palestinian territories. In particular they requested the Executive Director to submit the report requested in the resolution.

10. Some delegations called for increased attention to be paid to human settlements conditions in countries with economies in transition, particularly with regard to issues such as housing legislation reform, urban policy and modernization of the housing stock.

11. Several delegations stressed the importance of focusing on gender issues in general and on the issue of discrimination against women in particular. One pointed out the need to mainstream gender issues within the Centre’s general budget and not to continue depending on earmarked contributions.

12. Several delegations stressed the importance of the Cities Alliance as a tool for implementing the Centre’s programme priorities and for coordinating the efforts of all stakeholders in implementing the Habitat Agenda. However, one pointed out that the Centre’s normative role in the partnership would need to be strengthened. Several delegations called for closer links between the Centre and other United Nations agencies, particularly UNEP and UNDP.

13. Several delegations addressed the role of local authorities in human settlements development. A number pointed out that international collaboration was best undertaken through and by national Governments. Others called for local authorities to be given an enhanced role in international development efforts.

14. Some delegations pointed out that the Centre’s initiatives should be channelled through established national agencies or organizations, including national Habitat Committees, rather than through individual consultants.

2. Follow-up to the United Nations Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat II)

(a) Local implementation of the Habitat Agenda, including the role of local authorities

15. Many delegations reported that their Governments had undertaken considerable efforts in following up on the commitments made at the United Nations Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat II) and in implementing the Habitat Agenda. Many had newly established or strengthened institutions entrusted with the formulation of shelter and urban development policies. Many had created special bodies, such as national shelter advisory boards or agencies to develop and coordinate policies for housing development. Some had set up new or revitalized housing finance institutions, with the focus on providing housing credit for low-income groups.

16. The important role of local government in implementing the Habitat Agenda at the local level was recognized by most delegations. Some welcomed the development of a World Charter of Local Self-Government, but felt that the text needed further revision to make it acceptable to all countries with their varied socio-political circumstances. However, one representative speaking on behalf of the Group of 77 and supported by other delegations cautioned against a globally binding World Charter, which would not take into account countries’ specific cultural, economic and political contexts. He stressed that the relations between central and local government had to be governed by the constitution and legal system of each country.
17. A number of delegations reported on reforms and the enactment of new legislation to strengthen local government and enable local authorities to play a more important role in the implementation of the Habitat Agenda. Some reported on the success of their decentralization policies, which had strengthened local government in developing partnerships with other stakeholders in shelter and sustainable urban development.

(b) International cooperation and the review of mechanisms for monitoring the implementation of the Habitat Agenda

18. Many delegations expressed support for a stronger role for UNCHS (Habitat) in international coordination, monitoring and evaluation of the implementation of the Habitat Agenda within the United Nations system and supported the proposed task manager system to coordinate and monitor the contributions of United Nations agencies to the implementation of the Habitat Agenda.

19. Many delegations emphasized the need for more international cooperation and support for their efforts to achieve the goals of shelter for all and sustainable urban development. In that context, some delegations advocated strong efforts by the Centre directed towards capacity-building. Many delegations referred to the technical cooperation support provided by the Centre and expressed appreciation for its efforts in the area of capacity-building. A number voiced the hope that a revitalized Centre would be able to provide more assistance to their countries in their efforts towards achieving the twin goals of shelter for all and sustainable urban development.

20. Many delegations expressed strong support for the Centre’s campaigns on secure tenure and good urban governance, with their strong focus on some of the most crucial issues. Those campaigns were considered to be important entry points for the implementation of the Habitat Agenda. Some delegations expressed their expectation of sustained follow-up activities.

(c) Lessons learned from best practices and partnerships in the achievement of adequate shelter for all and sustainable human settlements in an urbanizing world

21. Many delegations expressed their satisfaction with the Centre’s Best Practices programme, describing it as an excellent tool by which countries could learn from each other. Applicable examples ranged from the enactment of relevant legislation and the formulation of national action plans to specific projects in shelter provision, housing finance and urban management.

B. Consultations on the decentralization and strengthening of local authorities

Introduction

22. The Preparatory Committee for the Special Session of the General Assembly for an Overall Review and Appraisal of the Implementation of the Habitat Agenda recommended in its resolution 1/5 that “the Commission on Human Settlements should include a consultation on the effective decentralization and strengthening of local authorities and their associations and networks on the agenda of its eighteenth session, in relation with the item on local implementation of the Habitat Agenda, including the role of local authorities”.

23. Accordingly, the Commission held consultations on the effective decentralization and strengthening of local authorities and their associations and networks at its 4th plenary meeting, on 13 February 2001.

24. The Commission had before it a report by the Executive Director entitled “Consultations on the effective decentralization and strengthening of local authorities and networks” (HS/C/18/3/Add.1).

Discussion

25. All those who participated in the consultations expressed strong support for the principles of decentralization and the strengthening of local authorities, while several delegations also mentioned the important contribution of the European Charter on Local Self-Government in strengthening the contribution of local authorities. Several delegations expressed the view that local autonomy did not replace solidarity between all levels of government, and underlined the need for partnerships with the private sector and civil society. Several delegations voiced their concerns with regard to the binding nature of the proposed World Charter of Local Self-Government.

26. Some delegations expressed opposition to the proposed Charter on the grounds of its legally binding nature, the concept of local autonomy and the apparent contradiction between a universal model and a diverse world. The representative of the World Associations of Cities and Local Authorities Co-ordination described the genesis and development of the proposed World Charter and explained that it was intended to be flexible and adaptable to different contexts and legal frameworks.

27. Other delegations strongly supported the idea of a World Charter of Local Self-Government, while emphasizing that signing up to such a charter should be voluntary and that it would by no means constitute a universal model to be adhered to. One speaker said that local autonomy did not weaken the role of central government, and stressed the need for collaboration between all levels of government as a means of ensuring equity. Another said that local self-government made sense only if it was based on partnerships with central government, the private sector and civil society.

28. Some delegations emphasized that the draft Charter presented a menu of options from which countries could select in the light of their national constitutions and legal and administrative frameworks. A large majority of delegations that spoke supported the proposal made by the Executive Director for continuing dialogue and the setting up of an intergovernmental committee which would report to the Commission at its nineteenth session. However, some were not in favour of establishing such a committee, on the grounds that it would merely prolong the discussions on the charter, whereas there was a need for continuing dialogue among all partners on the key issues of decentralization and the strengthening of local authorities in support of the implementation of the Habitat Agenda.

29. All the delegations agreed on the need for and usefulness of continuing dialogue on decentralization and the strengthening of local authorities, but no consensus was reached on whether the dialogue should continue in a formal or informal manner. A representative of the secretariat pointed out that informal consultations had been taking place in all regions over the past three years. The Chair proposed that an informal contact group should be set up to seek consensus on the continuing dialogue for further consideration by the Drafting Committee.
C. Dialogues with local authorities and other partners

Introduction

30. A dialogue with local authorities and other partners on good urban governance was held at the 5th plenary meeting, on 14 February 2001. A second dialogue with local authorities and other partners on secure tenure was held at the 6th plenary meeting, also on 14 February 2001.

31. The dialogue on “Good urban governance: bridging the divided city” was introduced by Professor Richard Stren, Professor of Political Economy, University of Toronto, Canada, Mayor Celso Daniel, Mayor of Santo André, Brazil, Ms. Sheela Patel, Director, SPARC, India, and Mr. Max Ng’andwe, President, International Union of Local Authorities.

32. The dialogue on secure tenure was introduced by Mr. Jockin, President of the National Slum Dweller Federation of India, Hon. Djejouma Sanon, Minister of Housing, Burkina Faso, Ms. Jane Weru, Executive Director of Pamoja Trust (Kenya), Ms. Maria Locia Petersen, Municipality of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, Ms. Tabitha Siwale, Secretary of the Habitat International Coalition – Women and Shelter Network and Director of the Women’s Advancement Trust, a Tanzanian non-governmental organization, and Professor Geoffrey Payne (United Kingdom).

Discussion

1. Good urban governance: bridging the divided city

33. In discussing the divided city, the participants focused on four broad issues: (a) the relationship between good urban governance and poverty reduction; (b) the need for participatory democracy to reinforce representative democracy; (c) the need to create new mechanisms to support the urban poor more effectively in development; and (d) the obstacles to realizing good urban governance.

34. It was observed that the quality of urban governance is widely recognized as having a major impact on the reduction of poverty and promoting more inclusive cities. Some speakers, however, felt that there was a risk of oversimplifying the question of poverty by making it exclusively an issue of failed governance. Others emphasized that the quality of urban governance was important not only for achieving poverty reduction targets, but also for implementing the Habitat Agenda and for realizing the broader goals of sustainable development.

35. Speakers also discussed the need to reinforce representative democracy with participatory democracy. Some felt that without representative democracy, effective participation would not be possible. Others expressed concern that the importance of representative democracy and the role of political parties were not being recognized, and felt that representative democracy, at all levels, was a prerequisite for good urban governance. Yet others noted that representative democracy often served the interests of the rich and the powerful, leaving many groups, including women and the poor, excluded. Participatory democracy, it was argued, helped to ensure that all groups were involved in setting the developmental and policy agenda. Participants also noted that the poor had an important contribution to make to urban development, one that was often not tapped. The challenge was to convert the assets of the poor into productive capacity. In many cities, for example, the poor had mobilized themselves and were delivering services to their communities without any external support. Institutions that enabled, supported and protected the poor were fundamental to good urban governance. In that regard, the important role of governments in creating enabling frameworks and resolving conflicts between competing interests was highlighted. The active participation of women was also regarded as vital not only for poverty reduction, but also for improving the quality of urban governance.
36. Participants identified several obstacles to good urban governance, including the poor quality of urban data, inflexible public finance mechanisms and weak capacity at the local level. It was also noted that promoting inclusiveness was a bigger challenge in mega-cities than in smaller cities.

2. Secure tenure

37. There was general agreement that the Global Campaign for Secure Tenure would help the United Nations and its Member States to establish a new working relationship with organizations of the urban poor and recognize people living in poverty as strategic development partners. Some speakers argued that it was important to increase the decision-making powers of local wards, councils and administrative units at the sub-municipal level. Local councils, they said, enabled the organized poor to demonstrate their capacity and hold local governments accountable.

38. Speakers reaffirmed that the Global Campaign was an effective tool for the United Nations to strengthen the strategic role of women in development, particularly in the upgrading of slums and informal settlements. Some speakers mentioned that cultural practices and social conditions often prohibited women from exercising their rights to own, control, purchase and inherit land - even when those rights were enshrined in national legislation.

39. There was general agreement that the Global Campaign for Secure Tenure should promote security of tenure, rather than a particular form of tenure. It was agreed that since most slum dwellers were renters, rapid regularization and private titling of informal settlements would displace the poor. Some speakers mentioned the need to preserve "family" lands and other forms of collective ownership rather than replace them with systems of tenure based on individual freehold. Others stressed the need to recognize that different forms of tenure coexisted side by side in informal settlements.

40. There was further agreement that the Global Campaign should ensure that high-level launches were followed by operational initiatives in the form of capacity-building activities and slum-upgrading. In his synthesis of the Dialogue, the Chair stated that putting the Global Campaign into practice rested on three conditions: demonstrated political will, the existence of committed organizations of the poor and genuine partnerships between those organizations and government at all levels. He also emphasized that the Global Campaign should be implemented in accordance with the priorities of local actors in different countries. Such an approach was sound, realistic and conducive to effective results.
Annex IV
SUMMARIES OF OPENING STATEMENTS

1. Mr. García Durán said that, as the outgoing Chair of the Commission, it was an honour for him to address the opening meeting of the eighteenth session. The biennium that was just concluding had seen the launch of a plan for the revitalization of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat), which enabled it to present a positive image that day by day earned it greater trust and backing from the international community. The architects of that process had been Mr. Klaus Töpfer, acting Executive Director of Habitat until August 2000, and the newly appointed Executive Director since then, Mrs. Anna Kajumulo Tibaijuka. Mr. Töpfer had conceived the idea and set the work in motion, convened a high-level multidisciplinary team and given it the task of revitalizing the Centre, while the new Executive Director, whose training and experience were known to all, had carried on the work already begun, to be consolidated by the firm support of governments at the present eighteenth session of the Commission.

2. Included in the wide range of documentation before the present session of the Commission was a report prepared by the Bureau, as requested in resolution 17/7, on follow-up on progress achieved in the revitalization process. In that report, the Bureau had touched on its concern at the scarcity of resources, especially non-earmarked funds, and the need for more professional staff in the areas of administration and financial management. Other matters brought up had included synergy between the Centre and other organizations, the proposal to formalize the Committee of Permanent Representatives and the facilitation of preparatory work for the special session of the General Assembly for an overall review and appraisal of the implementation of the Habitat Agenda. In conclusion, he expressed his thanks to the outgoing Bureau and to the Committee of Permanent Representatives for their constant support and help, and to Mr. Töpfer and Mrs. Tibaijuka and their secretariats, who had greatly facilitated his work.

B.  Opening remarks by Mrs. Anna Kajumulo Tibaijuka, Executive Director of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat)

3. In her opening statement, after welcoming the delegates, the Executive Director expressed special thanks to President Daniel T. Arap Moi of Kenya for his Government’s continued support for the strengthening of United Nations activities in Nairobi. She also welcomed Mr. Joan Clos, the Mayor of Barcelona and Chair of the Advisory Committee of Local Authorities, which had been established in Venice in January 2000 at the request of the Commission at its seventeenth session. She thanked Mr. Klaus Töpfer and Mr. Germán García Durán, who, as acting Executive Director of UNCHS (Habitat) and Chair of the Commission, respectively, had rectified many of the Centre’s past problems and had successfully embarked on the process of revitalizing it.

4. The revitalization of UNCHS (Habitat) would be an ongoing process that would require continuing adjustments. That had been recognized by the General Assembly in resolution 55/195, which called upon the Secretary-General to secure adequate funding for the strengthening of the Centre. The time was opportune for rebuilding and strengthening UNCHS (Habitat), as both population growth and urbanization were increasing rapidly, with the world’s urban population doubling to 3 billion between 1950 and 2001. That rapid increase had overtaxed the ability of cities to cope - more than a billion city dwellers lacked adequate shelter and basic services - and caused serious environmental problems, highlighting the interdependence of urban governance and environmental governance.
5. In the light of the challenges facing UNCHS (Habitat), human settlements development had to be a priority. Recognizing this, world leaders had pledged at the Millennium Summit to improve the lives of at least 100 million slum dwellers by the year 2020 and had adopted the Habitat Agenda as a “practical road map to an urbanizing world”. At its seventeenth session the Commission had also adopted a new vision and added a normative dimension to the Centre’s operational activities by approving two campaigns that provided clear entry points to those seeking to address the challenges of human settlements development: the Global Campaign for Secure Tenure and the Global Campaign for Good Governance. Those two campaigns - the first of which had been successfully launched in the preceding year in Mumbai, Kosovo, Paris and Durban, and the second of which would be launched in the months following the current session in India and Nigeria - were seeking to build on a rights-based development agenda that put people at the centre of development and saw human rights and freedom as the fundament of sustainable development. As exemplified by the two campaigns, UNCHS (Habitat) was promoting a “spirit of urban belonging, engagement and reciprocity … a culture of solidarity and inclusiveness in all human settlements”.

6. The two global campaigns also exemplified a new cooperative approach at UNCHS (Habitat), in pursuance of which collaboration with other agencies both within and outside the United Nations was encouraged and negative and destructive competition was discouraged. The Cities Alliance initiative, undertaken jointly with the World Bank, was an example of that approach, as was a joint UNCHS (Habitat)/UNEP liaison office to the European Commission in Brussels, the joint UNCHS (Habitat)/UNEP Managing Water for African Cities programme and other programmes such as a disaster management programme in Iraq and the Housing and Property Claims Commission and Housing and Property Directorate in Kosovo.

7. In addition to its other activities, UNCHS (Habitat) was the secretariat for the preparatory process for the special session of the General Assembly on the review and appraisal of the implementation of the Habitat Agenda. The purpose of the review and appraisal process was to establish concrete initiatives for further implementing the Habitat Agenda. Those initiatives would be agreed at the second session of the Preparatory Committee for the special session, but the current meeting was nevertheless critical for sending a signal about UNCHS (Habitat)’s importance and the need to establish its credibility as the United Nations system-wide focal point on the Habitat Agenda.

8. In closing, she observed that UNCHS (Habitat) needed to establish itself as a leader in the provision of information on urbanization, and at the same time to increase its normative and operational activities, including the provision of policy advice on legal regimes to promote housing rights and inclusive cities, analysis of urban problems and their underlying economic causes and training and other forms of capacity-building. None of that would be possible without an increase in staff and resources. UNCHS (Habitat) needed secure funding, and she asked the delegates to honour the resolutions of the General Assembly calling for the further strengthening of UNCHS (Habitat) and to listen to the voices of the children who, earlier in the opening meeting, had told the delegates of their hopes and fears for their lives in the cities of Kenya.

C. Statement by Mr. Klaus Töpfer, Executive Director of the United Nations Environment Programme

9. In his opening address, the Executive Director of UNEP said that the Centre and UNEP had been inextricably linked for 25 years, not only because they shared the same premises, but also because they were the only two United Nations institutions to be headquartered in the developing world. Implementation of the mandates of the two institutions was also closely linked, as underlined by resolution 53/242 of the General Assembly. There could be no global environmental sustainability without the sustainability of human settlements, without overcoming divided cities, without secure tenure, without good urban governance and without shelter for all. He said that he would continue to be fully committed to the prosperous and dynamic development of the Centre. On behalf of UNEP, and on his own behalf, he affirmed total support for all the endeavours of the Executive Director of UNCHS (Habitat).

10. The Commission was meeting at a time of unprecedented international awareness with regard to poverty reduction and improvement of the environment and human settlements. It was also a time when environment and human settlements had taken their rightful place at centre stage in the development arena in preparation for the 5-year review of the Cities Summit held in Istanbul in 1996 and the 10-year review of the Earth Summit held in Rio in 1992, designated as the World Summit for Sustainable Development and scheduled to be held in Johannesburg in 2002.

11. UNEP and Habitat were cooperating in emergencies, in finding solutions to problems related to water and sewage and planning for waste, pollution and cities. He was therefore gratified to note that common projects such as "Managing Water for African Cities", the Urban Environment Forum, the Sustainable Cities Programme and the Cities Alliance were continuing and could be further developed.

12. He drew attention to the following interrelations between human settlements and the environment: rapid desertification was linked with the appearance of more and more environmental refugees, increasing the pressure on and explosive growth of urban areas; climate change was a direct threat to human settlements, given that nearly 40 per cent of cities with populations greater than 500,000 were located on coasts; the increase in the occurrence of malaria was a direct threat to human health and was also related to climate change; air pollution, especially that linked with mobility in the larger settlements, exceeded health standards in many mega-cities; and there was a public health hazard from contaminated water supplies and all kinds of disease transmission from inadequately treated sewage. All those challenges fell in areas of common responsibility for the Centre and UNEP, and the list could be easily extended. The common denominator for the Centre and UNEP would always be the two institutions' concrete contribution to the attainment of the main target of the Millennium Declaration which heads of State and government had adopted in New York in 2000 – “to reduce poverty by 50 per cent by 2015”.

13. He assured the Commission that UNEP would continue to cooperate with the Centre substantively and technically to achieve the common aim of sustainable cities in a sustainable globalized world, making the vision of the World Summit in Rio and the Cities Summit in Istanbul a reality: to overcome poverty in a world of economic progress, with social equity, cultural identity and environmental precaution.

D. Statement by H.E. Daniel Toroitich Arap Moi, President of Kenya

14. After welcoming the participants, President Moi congratulated Mrs. Anna Tibaijuka on her appointment to the post of Executive Director of UNCHS (Habitat) and said that she was taking up the management of the Centre at a time when the problems of shelter and sustainable urbanization had increased in both scope and complexity, owing to rapid urbanization, especially in developing countries. The successful implementation of the Habitat Agenda would continue to be of vital importance in the twenty-first century.

15. Noting that it was nearly five years since the holding of the Habitat II conference and the adoption of the Istanbul Declaration and the Habitat Agenda, he said that, as agreed at Istanbul, human health and quality of life must be at the centre of any meaningful effort to develop sustainable human settlements. He assured the participants of Kenya’s commitment and support for the preparatory process for the five-year review, and the special session itself.

16. The work of the current session of the Commission and the forthcoming session of the Preparatory Committee would be crucial for the success of the special session. There had been a striking lack of meaningful progress in meeting the challenges of ensuring adequate shelter for all, and to a very large extent most of the issues set out in the Agenda were still outstanding. Globally the past five years had been characterized by widespread poverty, recurrent armed conflicts and disasters, including droughts, floods and earthquakes. The impacts of changing global economic trends had also added to the toll. The adverse effects of those negative factors were more pronounced in developing countries, particularly in Africa, where the ability to cope was still weaker than in other countries. The special session would thus need to put in place concrete initiatives to strengthen global action to fulfil the commitments of the Habitat Agenda and ensure the achievement of its goals. Developing countries, and particularly those in Africa, required special support in their efforts to tackle rampant poverty, ensure disaster preparedness, develop mechanisms for early resolution of conflicts and improve the livelihoods of their citizens, especially those living in slum conditions in urban areas.

17. By pursuing the goal of “cities without slums,” the livelihoods of at least 100 million slum dwellers could be changed fundamentally and irreversibly by the year 2020. More importantly, through that undertaking, the international community had underscored the potential for urban settlements to influence development in the twenty-first century, as well as the need to improve people’s livelihoods. In line with that objective, he was pleased to announce that his Government and UNCHS (Habitat) were finalizing preparations for a slum-upgrading project in Nairobi, drawing on lessons learned globally. He hoped that the project would pave the way for the implementation of similar projects in other towns in Kenya, and lead to a lasting solution to the slum problem in the country.

18. Besides revitalization and reform, the Centre required adequate and predictable funding, in order to fulfil its mandate. The issue of human settlements was too important to be left in the hands of international philanthropists alone. He hoped that the international community would institute firm measures to ensure stable funding for UNCHS (Habitat) and reduce its dependence on voluntary contributions. That would enable the Executive Director to focus more on the management of the Centre and on programme delivery.

19. The interconnected nature of many issues had been shown in the children’s presentation. The future of the world lay in Africa’s wealth and he urged the participants to help Africa to overcome its problems. The city of Nairobi was growing and land was becoming scarce. It was necessary to tackle the huge problem of urbanization. Slum areas needed water and, to get it, they needed money. The third world war would be caused over water, and the problem needed to be tackled now. Protection of water could not be provided piecemeal. But the leaders of the developed countries did not want to listen. They wanted to tell Africa what to do. The money spent on all their seminars should rather be spent on alleviating slum conditions.

20. All participants were no doubt aware that the United Nations had recently downgraded the Nairobi duty station on the grounds of insecurity and problems related to infrastructure and energy. He wished to assure everyone that his Government was doing everything it could to resolve those problems. Road repairs and maintenance work were in progress in the city and elsewhere in the country. The energy situation had also improved considerably following the recent rains. The security problem had been worsened by the increase in poverty and unemployment during the last few years. Perhaps the relative security of Nairobi in the past had put it in the limelight, given that crime was a problem for cities the world over, especially in developing countries. It was pertinent to note that the journalists who reported on all the problems of neighbouring countries chose to live in Nairobi themselves. However, the Government of Kenya was committed to addressing the situation by tackling the social causes of insecurity, as well strengthening measures to curb crime. Indeed, in the last few months crime levels in Nairobi and throughout the country had shown a downward trend. He therefore urged all participants to feel safe, and wished them a pleasant stay in Kenya.
E. Statement by Mr. Sid-Ali Ketrandji, Chair of the Commission at its eighteenth session

21. In his statement following his election, the Chair expressed appreciation for the honour accorded to him and his country and assured the Commission and the Executive Director that he would do his utmost to discharge the very important duties and responsibilities bestowed upon him. He looked forward to cooperation from all the members of the Commission and the secretariat to enable him, together with all participants, to make the session a success. He also expressed the appreciation of all members of the Commission to Mr. Germán García Durán for having successfully led and conducted the work of the Commission during its seventeenth session in May 1999, and for the work which the Bureau of the Commission had carried out under his able leadership during the inter-sessional period.

22. He was very conscious of the importance of the issues before the current session, especially when put within the context of the revitalization and strengthening of UNCHS (Habitat). The Centre was at a crossroads, particularly with regard to its future and, consequently, its ability to deliver the services expected of it. Due to the problems experienced by the Centre since the historic Istanbul Conference, some momentum had been lost in the implementation of the Habitat Agenda at the local, national, regional and global levels. Therefore, there was an urgent need for the Commission to deliberate and pronounce itself in very unequivocal terms on what should happen to UNCHS (Habitat) and, consequently, to the implementation of the Habitat Agenda, since those recommendations were pivotal to the revival and accelerated implementation of the Habitat Agenda. The strategic vision adopted at the seventeenth session underlined three very important aspects for consideration at the current session: adopting a new implementation strategy by advocating the needs of the poor, through the two global campaigns on secure tenure and urban governance; sharpening the focus of the Centre’s work; and strengthening the normative capacity and the linkages between normative work and operational activities.

23. He concluded by appealing to all participants to assist him and cooperate in ensuring that the results of the session were what participants would like them to be, what governments would like them to be, what the respective regions would like them to be and, most importantly, what the poor, disadvantaged and homeless majority of the populations of the world would like them to be.
MESSAGE FROM THE SECRETARY-GENERAL OF THE UNITED NATIONS TO THE COMMISSION ON HUMAN SETTLEMENTS AT ITS EIGHTEENTH SESSION

1. It gives me great pleasure to send my greetings to all who have gathered in Nairobi for this eighteenth session of the United Nations Commission on Human Settlements.

2. As you know all too well, more than a billion of our fellow men and women around the world lack adequate shelter. The Millennium Declaration adopted at last September's Millennium Summit focused welcome attention on the fear, despair and miserable living conditions that characterize so many of the world's human settlements. Many of the development goals to which world leaders committed themselves in the Declaration were based on the work of United Nations world conferences of the previous decade, including the Habitat Agenda adopted at Habitat II in Istanbul. Among the wide-ranging commitments made by world leaders, all of which would contribute to progress in the area of human settlements, was the specific pledge to improve, by the year 2020, the lives of at least 100 million slum dwellers.

3. As custodians of the Habitat Agenda, the Commission on Human Settlements and the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements have a leading role to play in helping the international community to meet these challenges. The Commission can also do much to ensure the success of the special session of the General Assembly to be held in June in New York to review progress since Habitat II. You will have to work with a broad range of partners - including local authorities, non-governmental organizations, private-sector enterprises and other delegations of civil society. And you will have to focus on a wide range of issues - not only the provision of services and resources, but also environmental questions and the functioning of markets, financial systems and public administration.

4. In a world in which half of humanity now lives in cities and towns, the urbanization of poverty is one of the biggest global challenges of the new millennium. Slums and spontaneous settlements are wellsprings of entrepreneurial energy that can and must be mobilized. Together, we must offer the inhabitants of our cities and other human settlements the prospect of security, prosperity and a sustainable future. I wish you every success in your deliberations.
Annex VI

COMMONWEALTH INPUT TO THE PREPARATIONS FOR THE SPECIAL SESSION OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY FOR AN OVERALL REVIEW AND APPRAISAL OF THE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE HABITAT AGENDA

1. In 1998 the Commonwealth launched an independent initiative to address the challenges of the Habitat Agenda in its 54 member countries. The consensual mechanism it created for this purpose was the Commonwealth Consultative Group on Human Settlements.

2. Intergovernmental consultations culminated in the adoption by the Group of a new Commonwealth goal which informs all its programmes and activities. The goal requires demonstrated progress towards adequate shelter for all with secure tenure and access to essential services in every community by 2015.

3. In pursuit of this goal, the Group has produced a “Commonwealth input to Istanbul + 5”, which includes a number of important priorities for action to guide shelter development activity throughout the Commonwealth for the foreseeable future.

4. On behalf of the 54 member countries of the Commonwealth, the representative of Zambia introduced this input at the eighteenth session of the Commission on Human Settlements and requested the insertion of the present summary in the Commission’s report to the second session of the Preparatory Committee for the Special Session of the General Assembly for an Overall Review and Appraisal of the Implementation of the Habitat Agenda, and subsequently to the special session itself, as the independent contribution of the Commonwealth to the global efforts of the Commission to implement the Habitat Agenda.
